Salary Survey Data with Sources

ERI compiles the most robust salary, cost-of-living and executive compensation surveys available. The majority of the Fortune 500 and thousands of other annual subscribers use ERI analytics for compensation and salary planning, expert witness testimony, relocations, disability determinations, board presentations and setting branch office salary structures. ERI's Assessor Series allows quick analyses with retrieval of source documents (click on a dot for a Web download) via online software or purchase traditional surveys via ERI Salary Surveys.

Oftentimes More a Census than a Survey

Founded 20 years ago as an outsource of salary survey analyses, ERI has evolved into a geographic- and industry-specific salary survey, cost-of-living and executive compensation benchmark survey firm dedicated to research and development. ERI researchers collect skill measures and assist organizations with their compensation planning via feature-rich salary software. Traditional salary surveys sometimes reflect nonrandom samples, but ERI's databases have grown so robust that many ERI products can be better characterized as a census.

Subscribers rely on ERI compensation reports and software databases to analyze salary ranges, set competitive pay in the United States, Canada and Europe, research salary survey and geographic pay data, establish cost-of-living differentials for employee relocation allowances, determine merit increases, and prepare CEO and other executive compensation reports.

2012 ERI Salary Surveys Open for Participation

Participation is now open for 128 industry-specific compensation surveys, 19 job function surveys and two benefits surveys conducted by ERI Salary Surveys. Data collection ends on March 30. All of our compensation surveys are released in August. Participate and receive results at a 50-percent discounted rate plus a complimentary electronic copy of the executive summary when the survey results are released. Submit your data online or access an Excel or PDF copy of the questionnaire for submission by email, mail or fax by March 30. Results may be purchased on a national or state basis.

Special Offer: ERI Assessor Series subscribers can participate in ERI Salary Surveys via their Platform Library and receive the surveys free of charge.
